

Epistle To The Hebrews
Chapter Seven
11/20/24

The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews is unknown. For many readers, Hebrews is considered to be one of the most difficult books in the New Testament. A study of the Old Testament, its background and certain phases of the first-century can be beneficial.

The Epistle to the Hebrews is a tribute to the incomparable Son of God and an encouragement to the author’s persecuted fellow believers. It seems that the author was concerned that his Christian readers were wavering in their endurance. He approached this matter in a two-fold presentation: 1) the writer exalted Jesus the Christ, who he addresses as both “God” and “this man,” and is thus the only One who can serve as a mediator between God and man; and 2) he exhorted his fellow Christians to move forward unto perfection, and live by faith.

The author of Hebrews wanted to exalt Jesus Christ. An indication of this desire is the consistent and repetitive use of the Greek word kreitton, which means “better,” “superior,” or “more excellent”.

No other book in the New Testament ties together Old Testament history and practices with the life of Jesus as thoroughly as the book of Hebrews.

The King of Righteousness:

Hebrews 7: 1-10

Surety of a Better Priesthood:

vv. 11 - 22

An Unchangeable Priesthood:

vv. 23-28

Small Group Discussion:

- 1. What does this tell us about Melchisedec?
- 2. Are we obligated to give ten percent?
- 3. Discuss what our motivation should be for giving.
- 4. What conclusion does the author make based on the fact that Abraham gave to Melchisedec?
- 5. Review verse 7, “who is greater? Why is this significant? How does this show the superiority of Christ?”

Next Week’s Lesson:

No Class – Have a blessed Thanksgiving